Sylvie Anglin, Lower School Principal and Lab Parent
Biography

Sylvie is in her 11th year as the Lower School Principal and her 24th year at Lab. She earned an undergraduate degree in music performance, studying the French horn at the University of South Carolina. She discovered her love of teaching working at a small rural high school in Mississippi, just thirty miles from where she grew up. While earning her master's in curriculum and instruction from University of Illinois-Chicago, she was fortunate enough to do her student teaching at Lab. Before joining Lab as a teacher in 1997, she was a museum educator at the Adler Planetarium and Astronomy Museum. She also worked at the Field Museum of Natural History, designing curriculum and coordinating programs in their education department. She taught first-fourth grades in the Lower School for thirteen years prior to becoming the Lower School Principal, and is the mom of two Labbies, one who is currently in her sophomore year of college, and one who is a Senior at Lab this year.
