Building Plans Follow ISACS Evaluation

By DEBBIE GROSS and TED BORSTEIN

Funds for building additions to the Laboratory Schools have been proposed to the University of Chicago administration, according to> High School Principal Willard Congreve.

An evaluation report by representatives of the Independent School Association of the Central States (ISACS), compiled after a visit here last April and released to the faculty last month, found the high school lacking in physical education, unified arts and auditorium facilities and faculty offices. The report, however, commended faculty members for making optimum use of the current inadequate facilities.

ISACS, a nonprofit organization which purposes discussion of problems among private schools, requires an evaluation of all entering members of which the Lab Schools is one.

Compliments Program

Besides approving the Lab Schools for admission, the reporting committee complimented every aspect of its program, according to Director Francis V. Lloyd Jr.

The report praised the faculty for its use of innovation and experimentation in seeking to improve the curriculum.

The committee recommended, however, that "immediate attention" be given to the physical inadequacies which are impairing the school's program, Mr. Lloyd said.

Urges Attention

The report urged "immediate attention" be given to the unseated condition found in the dressing and shower rooms of "Sunny gym and the hazardous conditions in the gym floor boards, unprotected window sills and window guards) and on Jackman field (bleachers and assembled guard.

Present physical difficulties the report affirmed, are "far from adequate".

The committee also noted the poor facilities of the unified arts department, describing the home economics room as "nearly impossible" and the drama room "incredibly poor".

Reflecting the ISACS evaluation, tentative plans for construction include an addition to Sunny gym, remodeling of Bellfield hall and an addition to the auditorium and arts center.

Retail Mall

The auditorium may be placed on a second-story level over the mall between the gym and the U-High building with walking space retained beneath, according to Principal Congreve.

Funds are the chief obstacle to furtherance of the project at this time, Mr. Congreve says.

Inside Glimpses

STUDENTS differ on acceptability of long hair on boys. FIGURE 2 GIRLS prepare for annual Turnabout masses. FIGURE 3 BASKETBALL season opens Nov. 16 against St. Michael. FIGURE 4 HOCKEY mass faces aoustical Foulkere. FIGURE 5

Freshman Project Gets $35,000 State Grant

By ANI LOVENTHAL

A grant of $35,000 from the State legislature has been awarded the Laboratory Schools for the purpose of further development and expanding the Freshman Project. The money will be used over a period of two years.

According to Mr. Ernest Poll, head of the Freshman Project, part of the grant will be used to finance research on the Project. He says that some of the funds will be spent on classroom materials, including films, tape recorders, record players and teaching machines.

According to Principal Willard Congreve, the money also will be used to establish relations with other schools to pool ideas on programs like the Freshman Project.

The schools are Evanston Township, Evanston Township High School, the lab school at Sail State, the lab school at Indiana State university, the James Whitcomb Riley school and Wheaton school.

Misses will visit from these schools who will visit Freshman Project classes. U-High's representatives will exchange visits.

Other schools may be added to the program, Mr. Congreve says.

The Freshman Project, begun in 1951 with a pilot group of 42 students by Mr. Congreve and Mr. Poll, is designed to promote independent learning. Students have the opportunity to elect option courses and choose the amount of independent study and research time in their schedules.

2 Classes, S.U.

To Give Dances

Op art is the theme of this year's Turnabout date dance when the girls and boys will go "White and Silver," Saturday, Nov. 20, in the cafeteria.

Proper dress for the girls will be wool skirts and hose and belts for the boys suit jackets and ties, according to Student Union President Wendy Blum.

The preceding evening, Nov. 19, freshmen will stage their "Turkey Hop," 8-11 p.m. in the cafeteria.

School clothes will be proper at the Hop, where the boys may play.

Tight the junior blast off with a space party, 7:30-10:30 in the cafeteria.

Clothing Sale Offers Items from Abroad

Unique items from foreign countries donated by people who have been abroad will be featured at the Parents' Association Clothing Sale this weekend and Monday, benefiting the Lab Schools Scholarship Fund.

A lace mantilla from Argentina and boots from Venice already have been donated, a spokesman said.

Also new is a bake sale section, part of the gourmet food section introduced last year.

A special presale for Lab School parents and University personnel will take place 1-6 p.m. Sunday in Sunny gym (general admission at 2 p.m.). The sale open to the public will be 8 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4-6 p.m., Monday.

At the Spring sale, 200 women in 40 units earned $1,000 for the School and $5 per unit.

The Parents' Association also will have a Buzz and Ski sale, 3 p.m. today and Thursday and Friday, Nov. 18-19 in Blaine 214. Skis, poles, boots and equipment donated by 9-9:30 a.m. November 18.
Top Students Deserve Public Recognition

When ISACS evaluators commented that U-High’s art and drama facilities were inadequate, no one here was much surprised. And when they described the home arts room as “nearly impassable” and the drama room as “a small quarters and big head of the企图.”

Despite a shiny, up-to-date glass and chrome building at its heart, U-High is in dire need of better facilities for the art and physical education departments. (ISACS people were appalled by our gym’s brand of sanitation.) It is true, as the evaluators pointed out, that U-High’s facility has the ability to turn inadequacies into a driving force for change. In school elections, for example, the time is in place for students to get credit for winning class elections (themselves often popularity contests) and serving school organizations. Why not honor curricular achievements by naming the 10 students who scholastically rank at the head of each school?

Some people may condemn the proposal because naming the top students might hurt the feelings of others who did not rank as high. It is ludicrous to suggest that the teachers do not love all pupils and roses and that competition virtually is a way of life in this country. There are always disappointments along the way.

With school year just underway, there is plenty of time to consider this proposal. A thought leader (highest to new student) for U-High are heartbeat infections that rescue from outdated equipment and outlandishly small quarters is on the way. Why try, even if self-satisfaction from such improvements, but they are not so much among anyway.

New Plans: Nice Thought

Those students who make academically superior records during their first and high school years deserve the honor of being publicly recognized for their achievements at graduation time. Students are recognized for more frivous achievements of school life, such as走路 ability as a state or county court member. Students are already making academic gains.

One possible and, if there is any truth to 13—15 years old who is interested to be corresponding, to Francisco, in English, contact me and 1’11 pass your name along.

MUSIC NOTES

Filmed Opera Succeeds as Entertainment

(Editors’ note: Senior David Rubin, outstanding music student, was inter- viewed by the editors of the Chicago Tribune for the film of “La Boheme” at the Hyde Park theater.)

If you have lost your heart to Puccini’s “La Boheme,” the Lyric Opera of Chicago will be pleased to have a bit of dedication at times, so that the opera can be found to the public. A thought leader (highest to new student) for U-High are heartbeat infections that rescue from outdated equipment and outlandishly small quarters is on the way. Why try, even if self-satisfaction from such improvements, but they are not so much among anyway.

Most of the cast members, while

Light of America, is big

In 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up

Most of the cast members, while

in New York. The Metropolitan Opera performed it in 1926, with Sybil Thorndike and John Gielgud, he created the titular role in the Moscow Art Theatre’s production of “Hamlet.” He also starred in Elia Kazan’s

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra and NBC Symphony Orchestra and choruses, con- ducted by Herbert von Karajan, Europe’s biggest name in conductors. While there have unquestionably been better performances of this ma- jor-dramatic set the world over. The Metropolitan of Paris—the 1940 RCA Victor rec- ording of Verdi’s “La Traviata” with NBC Symphony Orchestra and chorus, and Jean-Pierre and Licia Albidau in the major roles, immensely commo- to—this one certainly lived up
Mystery Mugs

He's Scholar, Athlete;
She's Industrious Kook

by Joanna Breasil

The muscle-tied senior, shown here, whose name may be found in the ads, is evidence that one may be in athlete and a scholar simultaneously. He is captain of the soccer team on which he plays left halfback, an excellent skier, and is a National Merit Scholarship Semifinalist. He spent last summer programming computers for the University.

In his spare time, he says, he reads science fiction. He is popular as well as cerebral, as evidenced by the lack of class that has been formed for him (so far?).

Asked his future plans, this mystery-personality will tell you, "Well, I want to go to college." He also would like to go skiing in South America next summer.

This notable personality professes a dislike for cabbage, the Student Board and having smoke blows in his face. He enjoys chess and playing cribbage with his brother till 3 a.m. He can often be found with Chiara Siedler, Paul Karan and Robert Hutchison. For the secret of his success, Mr. X commented, "I'm extremely mentally healthy."

My ambition is to hardly eat anything," says the young lady whose face is hidden here. Since this blonde senior is assistant manager of the Snack Bar, her goal is particularly acute.

A busy gal, she is activities editor of the yearbook and an usher for assemblies.

"I know in odd many ways," remarked Miss X as she tried to think of some of them. "I love to go trick-or-treating on Halloween and get all dressed up so one knows who I am." Miss X knits sleeveless sweaters "because I can't stand to do otherwise."

This mystery mug looks forward to a trip through Europe, etc. on a Houdin. His "Favorite Things" include cinnamon pop-tarts, electric typewriter and Diet-Rite cola, to which she claims addiction. She dislikes people who protest because it's the thing to do, and she hates lumpy potato chip.

Miss X's plans for the future include the Peace Corps. Often seen with Kate Green, you can see her name in the ads.

Girls Gear For Annual Attack On Boys

By Judy Kahn

Man your battle stations, girls. Get ready for the attack. The Turnabout is coming and the girls must ask the boys to the dance. This year the date is November 20.

Every U-High girls admit they could live without this annual trauma.

Faced with the opportunity of girl-ask-boy, of course, some girls happily think, "Now I can choose between being chosen." Their faces are all smiles.

Then comes the actual planning. The questions, fears and doubts start forming in the girls' minds. Who shall I ask? Will be say no? What do I do if he says no?

There are some girls who think they don't have fears, but when the time comes to actually ask the boy, they find themselves asking, "How do you do it?"

Perhaps then the girls have some idea of what boys go through attracting dates.

"It's a lot of trouble asking a boy to a dance," commented several U-High girls to whom this reporter talked.

It's true that the girls at U-High chase the boys all year long, but they do it in more subtle ways than asking them to a dance.

To openly chase a boy is considered bad form by An Landers and Seventeen magazines. Student Union officers, while giving each girl a chance to invite a boy may have her hook out for, breaks a sacred rule: Thou shalt not hook overly.

Ignoring female moans and groans the officers announce cleverly, "Yes we've kept the Turnabout on the social calendar."

Maybe the inventors of the Turnabout thought U-High boys were being given a treat. Each year they can see how it looks to wait and be asked to go someplace.

"Maybe it's a good idea to change places, then everybody can go back to the regular custom and stop complaining about how they have the worst," a senior girl remarked philosophically.

"Think of the schools where it's troubled tradition for the girl to call for her date, drive him, make a coupon for him and take him out after the dance... and pay for it all," reminisced another.

"That really sounds like war!"
Standout Soccer Team Racks Up Top Record

Ending the season with a 4-1 romp over Francis Parker, October 29, here, U-High’s soccer Maroons racked up the best season record in school history, 6-4-2, eclipsing a 6-4-1 mark in 1963. Standouts on the team this year were Peter McGehee (see this issue’s Sportlight column), Mike Wolf and Mike Altrich. High scorer of the team was freshman Luthra, who tallied 10 goals. Fighting back against the fierce determination of its opponents, New

SPORTING CHANCES

Science Will Claim Pete

Photo by Stalmer Peter McGehee

BY WALLY MOORE

You'd think someone who excelled in soccer, baseball, swimming, ice hockey and ping pong might include sports in his future professional plans.

But junior Peter McGehee, who excels in all these sports, is preparing for an indoor job...and a fairly sedentary one at that. He wants to be a biological scientist.

Peter looks like anything but a scientist as he defends his team on the soccer field as a halfback, outfield on the baseball team (the hopes to make varsity this year), orstrives for the PSL 100-yard backstroke record.

Pete has been on the swim team all of his school years at U-High. His best soccer game (defensively) was a 3-0 loss to Evanston, he says.

Peter wants to go to Dartmouth, where he would like to continue his hockey and soccer activity. As far as his life's work is concerned, though, it's the science lab that beckons, not the sports areas.

SPARKING the Maroons basketball lineup this season will be these outstanding players, among others, on the varsity and junior varsity squads. They are, from left, Hugh Wilson, Ron Barnes, Bruce Baker, Charles Moore and Rich Stanfill. Hugh, Ross and Charley are on the varsity team.

Coach Makes Score In Baby League

PHIL Beacher Tom Tourlas has racked up his latest score not on the sports field but in the baby league. To him and wife Kay, October 14, was born a son, William Ed-ward. The newest Tourlas weighed in at 5 pounds, 12 ounces, ...a record but certainly a fine showing. And from the looks of daddy, the lad should grow up to be a strapping hunk of a fellow, we'll say.

STUDENTs Take Program Reins

Responsibility of junior and senior boys to conduct their own after-school sports program will receive another test when Mr. William Patlack, physical education department chairman, reinstates the plan next week. It was tried on an experimental basis in '53. The program will invest junior and senior boys with the responsibility of conducting themselves properly.

OPENING Cage Contest Promises Close Outcome

By JEFFREY STERN

Traditional non-league game with St. Michael will open the U-High basketball season 3:45 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 16 in Sunny gym. This one-year’s edition should be another in the tradition.

Last year and the year before there was not much to be contested, from Michael’s point of view, with them winning 65-54 in '54 and 72-53 in '55. Maroons roosters hope U-High’s boys get more than 55 in '56 because it’s going to take more points than that against last year’s Parish League champions.

The Warrriors probably have four returning men, a check of U-High’s statistics on the team reveals. Only one of the returners appears to be a strong shouter.

As for the Maroons, Coach Sandy Putkik said he is going to coach the game blind. By that he means he will test the boys at their positions, giving them a chance to show how capable they are.

With only 50 days of practice before the game, he doesn’t expect his team to perform perfectly. He says he will be able to teach basic patterns and fundamentals by June, leaving little time to truly develop the team to work well enough.

Coach and picking up after themselves, Mr. Putkik says. They will be permitted to play volleyball, badminton and tennis in Sunny gym between 4 and 5 p.m.

SPORTSIGHT

Academies’ Soccer Meet Should Impress U-Highers

By CHARLEY MOORE

On November 6, the Cadets of West Point will meet the Falcons of the Air Force academy in a soccer game at Stagg field. At 10 a.m., these teams will battle in a contest which should be of special interest to soccer-conscious fans who are in the area.

The game is being played in connection with the Army-Air Force football game at Soldier’s field later that day.

The teams met two years ago at Stagg field with Army winning kindly by a 1-0 score. After seeing the Ga- dets control the ball for the better part of this tie game, Air Force was improved.

Mr. Sanford Patlick, coach of U-High’s varsity soccer team, says he felt the game should head and trap the ball far better than any high school teams in the state, “The ballhandling was superb, while the teams employed outstanding offencive and defensive tactics.

Mr. Patlick also stated that the players have played for U-High this year and those on the free-shoot squad will be there to see this fine exhibitions of soccer skills. “It would be a worthwhile experi-

PHOTOS BY STAMLER
Teacher Makes All-Star Team

U-High has a national sports figure in its midst: a member of the United States Second String hockey team. Miss Margaret Maues, girls' physical education teacher, last year at the United States hockey tourney during Thanksgiving weekend at the Philadelphia (Pa.) Cricket club, received an honorable mention and as a result is an alternate on the U.S. squad's second string.

The position is chiefly honorary, she says, but the U.S. team does play squads representing other countries when they travel here.

Currently a team representing Great Britain and Israel is on tour here.

Miss Maues believes hockey is an ideal sport for girls in this country because their performances are not constantly being compared with those of men-sports. Though competition sometimes discourages girls in basketball and tennis, she says.

Faulkner Coach Warns, 'Look Out, U-High Girls'

By JUDY HOWE

U-High hockey girls face "a big threat from the south" 3 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 9, when they meet Faulkner here, according to one of the opponent's coaches. Though Faulkner lost to its only previous opponent this year, North Shore, 6-0 varsity and I-0 junior varsity, the team's coach feels that the scores don't reflect the team's ability. She said she believes that Faulkner's team this year is one of the best in several seasons, possibly because only a few players were lost to graduation in June.

Though Faulkner lost to the U-High varsity last year, it won against the J.V.

Mrs. Martha Rotter, U-High coach, says she will wait until Tuesday to see "the better team" win. She thinks the Faulkner squad is over-confident and U-High can win. U-High lost to Latin, October 16 at Lincoln park, 4-0 varsity and 2-1 J.V.

Against North Shore, unseated upon for 9 years, the U-High girls failed to make a dent, taking a 7-0 beating. The frost-soph squad did little better, ending on the bottom 2-0.

The game with Francis Parker raked out October 21 was postponed here Tuesday, after deadline.
Students Learn Typing For Use As Study Skill In College Work

Learning typing for use as a study skill, members of Miss Fay-nelle Haehn's classes are drilling for half the period and attempting new material and the other half to improve their ability. Miss Haehn teaches typing as a study skill for college work. College professors often require typewritten assignments, she explains, and research papers and reports must be typewritten.

The class is running quite well, with everyone still well on their way with their assignments. Students who can type and transcribe class notes in shorthand, she adds, can type at a much faster pace with the instructor's lectures and maintain more accurate notes. Miss Haehn says typing instruction may be introduced here at the pre-

Club To Study French Culture

To study all aspects of French life in the aim of the French club this year, according to Mr. Michael Flynn, its sponsor. Separating into interest groups, members will read report on French politics, journalism, sports, fashion, music, dances, wines and similar topics.

Mr. Flynn also hopes to have vis-

Jazz Musicians To Give Concert

A concert by the Jazz Workshop will be given Oct. 6th, Friday, Nov. 12, in the Student Union. Students who have attended classes will be invited. Players will include Judy Congreve, Bruce Jack, Ross Anderson, Spen De-

Visitor Finds Art Students Stimulating and 'Serious'

"I found them very stimulating" was Miss Gertrude Doederlein's reaction to U-High art students whose classes she visited October 20. An exhibition of 46 of her works concurrently was on display in the high school's Snack Bar, however, she added picnic-like and hot fudge and whipped cream to the 154. Mr. Robert Erickson, art department chairman, arranges the exhibition and visit.

A teacher at St. Luke Lutheran elem-

tary school here, Mrs. Doederle-

In addition to her graphic art work, Miss Doederlein has produced one of the Christmas plays at the Museum of Science and Industry. The interview's report will be sent to students according to a master class schedule which Mr. Conway pre-

Susan Denis Attends Red Cross Programs

Susan Denis represented U-High summer at the 1965 Red Cross Youth Training Center at Lake For-

crossed the machine. By pushing a button, the student also can hear

Snack Bar Business Up After Slow Start

The Snack Bar recovered from a slow start this year through price cuts and publicity, and business is better than ever, according to Steve Craig, manager. To further his optimistic goal of milkings a profit (goal the Snack Bar has not reached in the year of operation), Steve has added candy and hot buns and whipped cream to the usual fare served. The many dining girl patrons of the Snack Bar, however, have made pickles and Diet-Rite cola the hottest item on the menu, Steve says.

Another new feature for patrons has been clean-up service, but Steve found it necessary to have clean-up help, he says. Some of Jerry's friends believe he could start a fifth Chicago daily and make it profitable.

New Equipment Improves School's Instructional Services

By describing the tutoring program in other schools.

Mr. Jerry Neugarten, '65, whose course was to give the students an English translation of the phrase, "Worth It"

"I found them very stimulating" was Miss Gertrude Doederlein's reaction to U-High art students whose classes she visited October 20. An exhibition of 46 of her works concurrently was on display in the high school's Snack Bar, however, she added picnic-like and hot fudge and whipped cream to the usual fare served. The many dining girl patrons of the Snack Bar, however, have made pickles and Diet-Rite cola the hottest item on the menu, Steve says.

Another new feature for patrons has been clean-up service, but Steve found it necessary to have clean-up help, he says. Some of Jerry's friends believe he could start a fifth Chicago daily and make it profitable.

New Equipment Improves School's Instructional Services

By describing the tutoring program in other schools.

Mr. Jerry Neugarten, '65, whose course was to give the students an English translation of the phrase, "Worth It"

"I found them very stimulating" was Miss Gertrude Doederlein's reaction to U-High art students whose classes she visited October 20. An exhibition of 46 of her works concurrently was on display in the high school's Snack Bar, however, she added picnic-like and hot fudge and whipped cream to the usual fare served. The many dining girl patrons of the Snack Bar, however, have made pickles and Diet-Rite cola the hottest item on the menu, Steve says.

Another new feature for patrons has been clean-up service, but Steve found it necessary to have clean-up help, he says. Some of Jerry's friends believe he could start a fifth Chicago daily and make it profitable.