Medal Goes To Aldrich

Mike Aldrich is U-High's 1966 Bausch and Lomb Science award winner. The award, a bronze medal, is presented by Bausch and Lomb Inc. to the outstanding science senior with high scholastic standing and intellectual promise in the field of science in more than 8,000 schools across the country. Winners are eligible to compete for science scholarships at the University of Rochester (N.Y.). Mike, who plans science as a profession, has taken science, physics and chemistry courses here. At Edinburgh, Scotland, academy, which he attended his sophomore year, he took physics, chemistry and biology. Last summer he went to a National Science Foundation course in math at Mt. Herman, Mass. Mike is one of U-High's outstanding soccer players and is all-state. He was hospitalized 3 weeks ago and has not returned to school.

GRAPHICS SPECIALIST Arlene Eisen, Belfield 151, will include this watercolor of an abandoned rowboat in her art exhibit in Belfield 150. The show will begin February 21.

Photographer Gets Honors But Plans To Remain Amateur

Though he doesn't plan to become a photographer by profession, Senior Jim Graff continues to distinguish himself as an amateur shutterbug. His latest honor was an exhibit at Altman camera shop, 16 South Wabash avenue, one of the country's major camera firms. Since December Jim has been taking sports photos for the University of Michigan Daily. Last year, for his work on the Midway, he won a New York Times Certificate of Merit in national high school journalism competition sponsored by St. Bonaventure (N.Y.) university. Jim says he first became interested in photography in Mr. Robert Erickson's photography course here.

Band To Play At Assembly

U-High's award-winning Jazz band will perform in an assembly 7th and 8th periods, Wednesday, Feb. 23, at Mandel hall. The band received an excellent rating (superior is highest) at a concert at Oak Lawn Community high February 5. About 5 Illinois high school bands competed. Three U-High players were named to the all star band: Randy Sandke, trumpet; Danny Meltzer, guitar; and Ron Gerson, drums. Randy and Danny are repeaters from last year. Randy this year also won a scholarship to a national band camp to be used this summer. According to Mr. Dean Hey, Jazz band director, the assembly will include numbers from the contest, tunes from a concert the band performed at Wheaton (Ill.) schools and possibly some small ensemble tunes. "It will be a varied concert," says Mr. Hey.

Plays Shows Today, 'Ali' Plans Tour

Second and final performance of two short plays, "Zoo Story" and "The Lottery", begins 3:30 p.m. today in Belfield 342, admission free. Plays also were presented yesterday. Produced by the Little Theater of Drama Workshop, the plays are directed respectively by Freshman David Halpern and Drama Adviser David Kieserman. A "children only" sign will go up outside room 342 in March for "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" to be produced for children of the neighborhood and Lower school. No adults will be admitted unless accompanied by a child, Mr. Kieserman, the director, asserts. In April the play will be presented at the Children's Theater conference here and is expected to tour Chicago elementary schools. Mr. Kieserman also is preparing the senior play, "Thieves' Carnival", to be produced in May. Roles and actors, production jobs and crews for the plays follow:

ZOO STORY—Peter, Sarah Sax; Jerry, Karen Johnson. THE LOTTERY—Tom, Fred Langendorf; Tessie Hutchison, Meredith Warshaw; Bill Hutchison, Bob Aldrich; Joe Summers, Martin Snider; Jack, Bill Barclay; Mrs. Dunbar, Sue Fiske; Mrs. Watson, Carolyn Wilkins; Dela Croix, Brenda Williams; Warner, Robert Skeeles; Belva, Elizabeth Hodge; Miss Bessom, Ellen Irons; Martain, David Hyman. Technical director, Tom Aldrich; props, Sonya Baehr; makeup, Laura Melnick. ALI BABA—Ali Baba, Robert Aldrich; Hassan, James Lewontin; Khazzim, David Boorstin; Robber Chief, John Kuhn; Foomeeya, Joanna Breslin; Morjana, Sonya Baehr; Shaherazade, Ruth Jones and Claudia Bader; Hud-Hud, Sara Gottlieb and Charlotte Miller; Kuz-Kuz,

King, Queen Race Begins Thursday

Race for Bazaarnival Queen and King—the school's only royalty—begins in homerooms next Thursday, Feb. 17, when every student can nominate on a blank ballot the five most popular girls and five most popular boys in his class. From these nominees each class will select its most popular girl and boy, who become members of the Bazaarnival Court and candidates for Queen and King, by ballot in homerooms, February 24.

Election of the five most popular senior girls and five most popular senior boys holds special significance because, in a tradition begun last year, they will be featured in the Midway's graduation issue.

Also following last year's practice, the names of the four couples making up the royal court will remain the secret of Midway Business Managers Joe Kenig and David Hahn and Adviser Wayne Brasler—even the candidates won't know—until their announcement in the March 11 issue.

The Queen and King will be elected at the Bazaarnival Saturday, April 23, when students may buy 5-cent votes to cast for one of the four couples. The Midway staff this year took over sponsorship of the contest, which benefits charity, and brought in a record 6,000 votes and $300.

A feature of the contest which sets it apart from most high school royalty races is that, because candidates come from all four classes, not just the seniors, a student could become Queen or King one year and be elected again to compete the following year.

James Moulton; Bou-Lous, Judy Feldman; Toos, Matt Jaffey; Bul-Bul, Susan Fiske; and dancing girls, Judy Kahn, Brenda Williams, Karen Johnson, Ellen Irons, Marick Lauvergnat, Maria Nipson, Martha Kurgans and Sarah Lincoln.

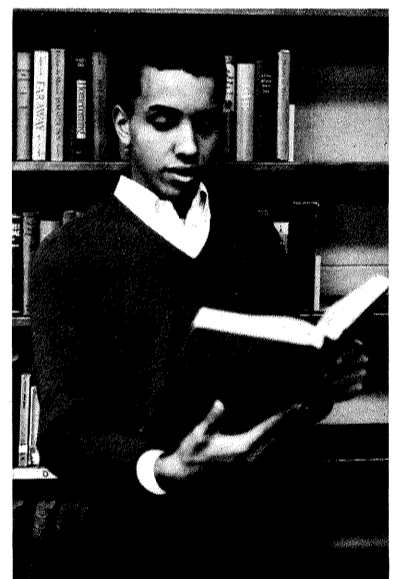

Technical supervisor, Robert Storr; production, Thomas Holaday; assistant director, David Lewontin; production stage manager, Susan Grant; costume chairman, Maria Nipson and Martha Gottlieb; properties chairmen, Paul Kaplan and Cathy Collier; makeup chairman, Mary Barclay and Linda Holaday; promotion manager, Deirdre English; Debbie Groban and Debbie Bakan; advertising manager, Mary Davis; choreographer, Claudia Bader. Several positions were unfilled at presstime.

THIEVES' CARNIVAL—Technical director and set designer, Richard Notkin; assistant director, Wendy Blum; costumes, Anne Ringler; properties, Buff McCleary; makeup chairman, Kate Green; chief electrician, Mike Aldrich; house and tickets, Linda Carlson; play committee chairman, Margie Mintz. Ad manager unselected at presstime.

First Monarchs Elected in 1963

Two Win Nat'l Scholar Award

HUGH WILSON, above, and Roscoe Giles are winners of National Achievement scholarships, sponsored by the National Merit Scholarship corporation to increase educational possibilities for outstanding Negro students. Hugh's scholarship is underwritten by a 1964 Ford Foundation grant which began the program. Sponsor of Roscoe's award, the Spiegel company, presented his scholarship in a ceremony February 3 in Principal Willard Congreve's office (photo next issue). Hugh and Roscoe are among 250 winners from 5,600 candidates.

Article Cites Grad For Journalism Work

Jerry Neugarten, '65, is recognized for his scholastic journalism achievements in the Review magazine of the Northern Illinois School Press association for November-December, 1965, which relates a Midway story on Jerry in the Nov. 5 issue.

Parents Turn Journalists

THEY'RE LABSCHOOL mothers but they're journalists, too! Mrs. Mary Naunton, left, Mrs. Ann Lutterbeck and Mrs. Heather Taylor, along with Mrs. Judith Getzels, Mrs. Beverly Pollock and Mrs. Peggy Grant, are editors of the new Parents Newsletter, being mailed to all Lab School homes five times this year by the Parents Association. The newspaper, which carries the name of an earlier publication, contains school news of interest to parents plus in-depth features such as a comprehensive study of the Freshman Project in the January edition, to which the ladies point. Publications Adviser Wayne Brasler suggested and helps edit the newspaper.

No Honor In Code Rejection Here

Honor code designed to combat cheating has been proposed for U-High by representatives of the Student Board, which asserts that the proposal, to be effected, would have to receive the overwhelming support of the faculty and student body.

Such support doesn't seem likely. The code proposal, evidently, has fallen upon deaf ears, or at least ears pretending to be deaf. Reaction of the faculty to the proposal has been disappointing disinterest. Only 23 of 79 teachers initially responding said they were in favor of even looking into an honor system. Perhaps the teachers don't care about the problem of cheating. But more likely they simply don't consider it that great a problem here.

Most U-Highers would admit to having cheated at one time or another during their high school careers. If comment around school is an indication, majority opinion is that an honor program would never work here. Until such a program is tried here, however, no one will ever really know whether it can be a success or not. The results could be surprising.

It is unfortunate that a faculty and student body noted for their receptiveness to experimental progress refuse even to consider an honor code.

Students Find Defects In Honor Code

By David Boorstin

"To make your children capable of honesty is the beginning of education."

—John Ruskin

Are U-Highers "capable of honesty"? Several weeks ago a group of students went to New Trier high in Winnetka to learn about an honor system which might be adapted for use at U-High. In the New Trier system, optional for each class, every student, before taking an exam, signs a pledge that he will not cheat on the test and that if he sees any cheating he will report it by crossing out his signature (no specific cheaters are reported). If cheating is reported, a committee attempts to convince the class that it must be stopped.

Don Reitzes, a junior, thinks that such a system would be effective at U-High. "I think an honor system would stop cheating, because once a student has been put on his honor, he can be trusted," he believes. Senior Claudia Bader, however, takes an opposite view: "Any person who is going to cheat will do so whether or not there is an honor system; signing a piece of paper will not keep anyone from being dishonest," she says.

Don Reitzes

Claudia Bader

Other students, like Sophomore Jackie Friedman, feel that younger students might not be capable of handling such a system. "Although an honor system might benefit juniors and seniors, not all freshmen and sophomores are mature enough to cope with this responsibility," Jackie asserts.

Jackie Friedman

Senior David Lewontin believes institution of an honor system here would be illogical in view of recent school policy. "If the administration apparently finds itself unable to trust students to manage their own use of alcohol or cigarettes, how can it trust them to manage themselves during examinations?" David says. "I don't oppose the honor system per se, but it would be totally inconsistent of the administration to permit it in the light of their present student policies."

David Lewontin

DEAR EDITOR

Washrooms Need Better Lighting

Dear Editor,

It is my understanding that we have a very progressive school and that the administration will bend over backwards to further that goal. Through oversight, no doubt, it has failed to recognize that we have a chronic problem with our washrooms. To be specific, the lighting in the said washrooms is rather unflattering. It makes anyone who looks at the mirrors look pale and sick regardless of sex or physical condition. Lord only knows that the female student body spends enough precious time applying makeup and it takes forever to make oneself look glamorous. Miss America would look like bad news with the rather poor illumination that the lighting provides. Why can't U-High have progressive washrooms like everyone else? I sincerely believe that this pressing and urgent item should be on the Student Council's agenda and hopefully be remedied after their next meeting. I also believe that the Midway can champion this worthy cause. That'll get some action should this letter fall by the wayside and not come to the attention of those who can do something.

Council Assembly Won Audience

By Jeff Stern

Finally—an interesting assembly. Student Council's 50th anniversary was marked by an informative week of U-High history highlighted by a dignified, well-planned presentation in Mandel hall.

when he told a joke, sincere applause for fine speeches. The S.C. assembly proves that interesting, informative programs planned in advance will be welcomed by students as something more than an excuse to get out of phys ed or a math test.

Attendance procedures may have become less rigid, with roll taken only during 2nd period, to benefit both students and teachers with greater flexibility of class organization and material presentation, but when Social Studies Department Chairman Philip Montag took over Soc Sci Teacher Caroline Cooper's classes as he did one day recently, I'm sure he expected more students than the four who showed up. Not until word was passed throughout the library and the cafeteria that "No, just because Mrs. Cooper is absent doesn't mean that we're not having class," did students come straggling back into class one at a time.

Keeping up in the scholastic journalism community—and, if possible, out in front—is a challenge to every school newspaper staff. Attempting to keep abreast of what other papers across the country are doing, the Midway exchanges issues with more than 125 topflight publications from Michigan to the Panama Canal zone.

Imagine our staff's surprise when we opened a copy of the Pioneer, from Southwest high in St. Louis, and found a photo of its staff reading an exchange copy of the Midway. No explanation for the Midway's presence in the picture was given, but possible reasons have provided staff members with something new to think about.

PEARLS BEFORE

Book Reflects New Style

By David Boorstin

Don't let the title scare you. "The Kandy - Kolorado Tangerine - Flake Streamline Baby" is neither a pop-art novel nor a handbook on obstetrics. It is, technically, a collection of pieces written by Tom Wolfe for various magazines, and concerned with sundry bits of modern Americana. I say "pieces" because I dare use no other word. They are not essays, nor are they dissertations or articles—one might call them anthropological journalism.

What Tom Wolfe does is to communicate the feeling of a place or person, using only the journalistic facts, his consummate skill at writing and the viewpoint of a biologist contemplating some wonderfully complicated animal.

If I could write like Tom Wolfe, I could take a soc sci class, dissect it, describe the feelings in the air, the facades of student and teacher and then put it all together again in two sentences.

If I could write like Tom Wolfe, I could interview someone and get replies to my questions that would by themselves show more of that person's character than pages of personality analysis.

But the main point about Tom Wolfe (a journalist by trade) is that his style is completely modern, in a way previously unknown. Here is one sentence describing a group of Las Vegas tourists:

"And there at eight o'clock Sunday morning stand four old parties from Albuquerque, New Mexico, up all night, squinting at the sun, belching from a surfeit of tall drinks at eight o'clock Sunday morning, and—marvellous!—there is no one around to snigger at what an old babe with decaying haunches looks like in Capri pants with her heels jacked up on decorated wedgies."

I hope Tom Wolfe makes a fortune of it.

Feeding U-Highers Takes Imagination

By Judy Howe

Chances are that those muffins you ate in the cafeteria last week had prunes in them. So did the biscuits, pie and cake which you may have munched earlier this year. But don't complain about all those prunes—you didn't know about them until I told you.

And, after all, it's easy to complain about school food. It's not so easy to make it as good as it is.

The cafeteria here receives government commodities it can't afford to waste—the cafeteria operates at a loss—and must work into the menu, explains Mrs. Mary Landers, food supervisor.

These commodities include applesauce, powdered milk, lard, flour and corn meal.

Trying out cake recipes which conceal the taste of the prunes, for example, is one of Mrs. Landers' responsibilities.

"It is a real challenge to use these commodities and at the same time cover up the taste of the more unpleasant foods," she says.

Getting U-Highers fed is a mammoth job, according to Mrs. Landers. The kitchen staff, which includes a cook, pastry woman, salad girl, desert girl, two porters and a storeroom attendant, arrive at the cafeteria 7:30 a.m. and leave 3:45 p.m.

Mary Landers

To serve its 600 daily student patrons macaroni and cheese—to cite a typical menu—Mrs. Landers needs 30 pounds of macaroni (that's about 50 pounds after it swells because of cooking), 12 pounds of grated cheese, 3 pounds of butter and 7 gallons of milk.

Fifteen #10 cans (those great big ones) of peas and 18 #10 cans of fruit cocktail would be required for the side dishes.

One of the cafeteria staff's most difficult tasks is serving each student the same sized portion of food.

"If a kid sees the person in front of him get an ounce more, he violently protests," Mrs. Landers asserts.

Mustard and catsup inspire other complaints. "When there is only catsup or mustard, the students complain bitterly," Mrs. Landers explains. "When I put out both, no one eats the catsup."

She still hasn't come up with a solution to this dilemma—just one of the hundreds a high school dietician faces daily.

Boldness May Trip Cagers

Guarding against overconfidence will be important to the Maroons when they meet Glenwood's Wildcats 3:30 p.m. there. U-High beat Glenwood earlier this year after coming up from behind. Center Lou Manelli and Second Team All-League Bob Arata will be the Wildcats to watch.

Latin Has Advantage

The Maroons go to Latin, 3:30 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 15. The Romans are not strong, but they are aggressive (they lost to U-High earlier this year by a close 75-64 compared with a 50-26 at the half). Their greatest advantage is a home court sometime referred to by opponents as "The Box." If the Maroons are too sure of their power, they could be in for a surprise.

Both Glenwood and Latin will be crucial encounters for the frosh-soph team. A loss could eliminate them from first place or a first tie. Bowen gave the Maroons their 3rd loss of the year 84-73 there, January 25. The Maroons led 48-41 at the half, but were outscored 19-6 and outplayed in the 3rd quarter. They made a slight but ineffective comeback in the final quarter.

Ron Barnes led the points with 23 and Charley Moore followed with 19. Peter Wolf scored in double figures again with 13.

Illiana Victorious

For the second time this season the invincible Vikings of Illiana stopped U-High, 73-60, January 14 here.

U-High came closer than any other White division team toward beating Illiana. The game put the Vikings at 8-0 (!), Maroons at 6-3 and North Shore at 8-1, making a tie for second place in the division conceivable for U-High and North Shore.

For U-High Barnes made 21 points and Moore 17. From the Viking powerhouse, Bill Terpstra fired in 32 and made a great showing under the boards. Guard Terry Groot was held to 18 and Van Prooyen to 17.

Girls' Lineup Looks Tougher

With what would have been the only returning player, Beth Page, deciding not to return to the basketball courts this year, the girls' basketball season has taken on a new look—a tough look. The all-new varsity faces a lineup of experienced foes.

Tomorrow at 10 a.m., here, the Maroonettes meet Ferry Hall and Elgin. That Ferry Hall girls must spend every waking moment on the hockey field is legend here. The Elgin girls likewise are experienced. The morning should be rough-going for the U-High girls.

Timothy Christian is the next opponent, 3:45 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 15, there.

The cagerettes lost their first two encounters, 44-26 to Faulkner, January 25 here, and a heartbreaking 48-46 to Luther North January 28, here. They had figured the Luther game to be certain victory.

Junior varsity also lost to Faulkner with a gaping 36-14 for a final score.

Varsity spirits were boosted as U-High trounced Francis Parker 46-4 February 4 here, repeating a similar performance last year.

marked by great playing and spirited cheering from both sides.

Charley Moore scored 23 points in the first half and Ron Barnes added 21 to pace the Maroons to their 12th win of the season against Lake Forest Academy, February 4, there.

Star Swimmer Madorin, Likely Candidate For State, Leads Maroons To Districts

Varsity Captain Mark Madorin—U-High's greatest swimmer and likely candidate for state finals—leads U-High swimmers into Illinois High School District Championships next Friday and Saturday. Cocaptains Bob Bergman and Stan Denis, Backstroker Steve Wright, Breaststroker Tom Neustaetter and several other Maroons also will represent U-High when the meet splashes off 6 p.m., February 18, at Dalton, Ill.

The meet resumes 1:30 p.m. the next day.

Before districts, U-High faces Glenwood at home 3:45 p.m. this afternoon. In an earlier meet this year, the Maroons sunk the Wildcats 57-27.

Madorin, who will swim the 100-yd. butterfly and 200 medley relay at finals, probably will be U-High's first swimmer to go on to the state meet, this year February 25-26 at Hinsdale South high school. Coach Ed Pounder says, "Mark's chances are really excellent."

Mark is only 1 second away from the state qualifying time in the butterfly, :58.0. To participate in the state meet, he will have to finish 1st or 2nd in his district or break a qualifying time, according to the rules.

SPORTLIGHT

Terry Leads With Rebounds

By Skip Moore

Forward Terry Kneisler has provided the rebounding punch that has enabled the Maroon basketball team to gain its 12-4 record. At 6 feet, 1 inch, Terry has led the varsity in rebounds against nearly every opponent. But it is in the spring, when the baseball season opens, that he really exhibits Terry Kneisler his athletic powers. In 3 years of pitching, Kneisler has compiled a 7-1 record, throwing a one-hitter against Francis Parker as a freshman. He was selected for the all-conference team in his sophomore year, and his high school batting average is better than .300.

Terry says he enjoys water polo, golf and beating North Shore at anything. Last summer he went to the White Sox boys summer camp. Terry sums up his 4 years at U-High saying, "The school has great kids and tremendous facilities, but what we really need are glass backboards."

Gary Lindon paced the frosh-soph squad to an easy 50-36 victory.

Harlan came in 49, U-High 41 and Dunbar 36 here February 4. Phil Engstrom, in a virtuoso performance, was 1st in high hurdles, 2nd in high jump and 4th in low hurdles.

Dates To Visit 'Moulin Rouge'

C'est la magnifique! Paris is coming to U-High. All the romance and intrigue of France will be evident at "Moulin Rouge", a Student Union date dance, 8 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 26, in the cafeteria.

Proper attire for the dance, according to Social Coordinator Debbie Zisook, will be formal. She recommends heels and party dresses for girls and ties and dark suits for the boys. Corsages also are appropriate for the dance, Debbie reminds.

Committee chairman are as follows: Decorations, Lynn Simon; entertainment, Nancy Selk; refreshments, Margie Mintz; signups, Frannie Fishbein; and bids, Debbie. Tonight the sophomores hold a party 8:30 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Lack Of Interest Places Concept Publication In Doubt

"There may not be a Concept this year, due to lack of student response," informs Joanna Breslin, unofficial student chairman of the literary magazine.

Concept, begun 6 years ago, has, in the past, published a selection of writing, photography and art work submitted by U-Highers for publication. So far this year, three entries have been submitted, "hardly enough for a seventh edition," Joanna says.

Council Grants Paper $300

Student Council is appropriating the Midway $300 to enable publication of additional 6-page issues, announces President Charley Moore.

The Midway this year initially was allocated $1300 from the activities fund, enough to finance the first four issues (26 pages at $50 printing cost each). The staff must finance the other 11 issues and first-day Midwayette with advertising revenue, $2500-$3500, depending on the number of 6- and 8-page issues.

cluded only girls from parochial schools but this year has been opened to public and private school students.

The three U-High girls, Julie Dorfman, Laura Grad and Peggy Stanton, will compete for individual and team awards.

Speakers Laud S.C. On 50th Anniversary

By Judy Kahn

"We are here today to honor you because you have done great honor to us," stated Prof. Edward Rosenheim, speaker at an assembly honoring the 50th anniversary of the Student Council January 26 at Mandel hall.

There are three aspects of the present Council which make it an effective one, according to Prof. Rosenheim. These are freedom, responsibility, and a community of scholars.

"It's not surprising that the Student Council has lasted for 50 years, because the Lab School gives the students responsibility and they take it," Prof. Rosenheim said.

"Chicago is a place where there is constant inquiry, a reaching out for new problems, freedom of thought, where new answers are constantly being proposed. The U-High Student Council exemplifies this statement, he said, with its concern and participation in school, community and world affairs.

Also speaking at the celebration program was Mrs. Ida Depencier, retired 5th-grade teacher and author of a Lab Schools history. She traced the organization of the first student councils at U-High in 1903-04 and 1907-16 and commended the present Council, founded in 1916, for its "adaptability, resiliency and long life in a school of change." She called the group "remarkably tenacious."

Lab Schools Director Francis V. Lloyd said, "We are here not so much to celebrate the 50 years of the past as to look to the next 50 years."

Today's high school students are more concerned with world affairs than their predecessors, Mr. Lloyd noted. "There may be some advantages to what might be considered an almost desperate world situation," he said. "It has stripped away some of the minor and lesser concerns that used to involve young people."

Principal Willard Congreve summarized the thoughts of the assembly by saying, "The Student Council is really you, each and every one of you, and your job is not done, it has just begun. I applaud what the Student Council has done and I commend what it is," he concluded.

Mr. Congreve and the other speakers were introduced by Council President Charley Moore, who was a platform guest along with Julie Dorfman, vice president; Ted Becker, treasurer; Linda Carlson, secretary.
