Moratorium

Decisions to be made, decisions that were made

By Susie Gordon

Questions of moral position, legal safety, financial resources and state education requirements confront Leo Schools administrators as they decide the school's policy on future Vietnam Moratorium days.

School policy for the October 15 Moratorium will not necessarily be the same for those to come, according to Leo Schools Director Francis V. Lloyd.

Principal Carl Rinne is asking student government and faculty members to help him form a committee of students to investigate, make recommendations on and coordinate a High School policy for remaining Moratorium days.

Coordinated by a national committee based in Washington, D.C., the Moratorium plan calls for citizens to abandon their usual activities for a day or part of a day and participate in anti-Vietnam war meetings, rallies, debates, study programs, petitioning and public information projects. Moratorium days are projected to increase one per month until the war is ended.

MR. LLOYD DECIDED, on the advice of the faculty policy committee and the University's legal department, to effect the following measures October 15:

- Reschedule for Moratorium Day a 12:30 p.m. early dismissal originally scheduled for today.
- Allow teachers to act in accordance with personal conscience in regard to attending school or holding classes.
- Subtract one day's vacation from absent non-teaching staff unless they have made other arrangements satisfactory to their employer.
- Hold optional special classes and activities related to the Moratorium.
- Lloyd earlier had announced that absent teachers would be required to pay for substitutes if they could not arrange for a colleague to cover their class.
- University legal advisors told him such a policy might contradict President Edward Levi's October 2 announcement that "faculty and students should decide on an individual basis what their activities for the day will be."

The Moratorium had been brought originally to student government's attention by a group of concerned students.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT officers scheduled a 15-minute home-room program October 3 to acquaint students with the Moratorium proposal. Students spoke on behalf of the Moratorium, then handed out a referendum form on which students were invited to indicate what action they thought the school should take.

The faculty, at its meeting the next Monday, refused to complete an identical referendum because several teachers objected to the idea of a popular vote deciding the issue.

According to the faculty minutes, the official position was, "We will not respond to your referendum because it would be improper for this institution, as an institution, to take a position on a political issue."

This school year 36 days of Moratorium have been projected.

Dean of Students Stansrod Car- michael said the cost of substitutes for teachers missing 36 days of school would amount to $720 per teacher.

Principal Carl Rinne said, "The school probably could not afford to pay substitutes for teachers absent on matters of personal conscience if 'personal conscience' includes not only the expanded Moratorium program but other social or political programs as well."

Besides finances, administrators have been faced with the moral question of what position the school should take on the Moratorium (also see editorial page 4).

MR. LLOYD said he did not feel the school, as an institution, should take political stands on issues such as Vietnam or the Moratorium.

Rinne added, "When a school is politicized it loses its unique capacity to deal objectively with problems of social and moral import."

If the school took an official stand, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to discuss both sides of an issue objectively. Opposing views would be greeted with sniggers.

"The school has to work hard to protect academic freedom."

Of the Moratorium specifically, he said, "Regardless of the school's official stand, the great frenzy here about the Moratorium threatens academic freedom in our school."

If you don't believe me, ask someone in this school who supports Vietnam, I doubt strongly that they feel free to speak out."

(continued page 3, col. 4)

On the inside:

THEATRE WORKSHOP finds a play and a place to give it...Page 2
U-HIGHERS think the conspiracy trial won't accomplish much Page 5
THE PRINCIPAL responds to a Midway editorial Page 4
RAIN in South Hall Page 5
STUDENT UNION takes over cheerleader sponsorship Page 6

Photo by Jethroe Smith

MANY U-HIGHERS actively supported the October 15 Vietnam Moratorium by distributing leaflets, participating in demonstrations and attending programs on campus and in other parts of the city. Senior Roberta Callard, distributing literature on the Moratorium in her apartment building, waits for a neighbor to answer her knock.
Union may use police for party security

University Police may be placed on duty at U-High parties to discourage crackers.

SLCC President Steve Pitts is considering such a plan because intruders disrupted the first school party, "Autumn Haze," October 3.

They mostly were neighborhood teenagers, according to U-Highers.

Parents to visit for Open House

Parents will fill their children's shoes at Open House, 2:30-3:30 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 26. They will follow their children's schedules for 16-minute classes, according to cop Carl Blane.

Teachers will describe their courses and answer questions. They have been instructed to refuse private conferences and schedule them later.

Mr. Rinnie and Lab School Director Francis V. Lloyd Jr. will give opening speeches. Refreshments will be served throughout the program and during a 20-minute lunch.

Parents are encouraged to come to school at 1:30 p.m. to get schedules and directions.

Magazine plans additional issue

Three instead of two issues of Concept, U-High's literary magazine, will be published this year according to Faculty Advisor Vicki Lassar.

SLCC has given U.H. magazine $600 for the third issue to help with its debts.

The staff has been formed and is planning its first issue.

Enrollment down

Enrollment in U-High is down eight students from last year to 608, according to Admissions Secretary Lorraine Kubiak.

Enrollment by classes (last year's in parenthesis) is as follows: Freshman, 174 (164); sophomore, 146 (138); junior, 149 (143); senior, 146 (167).

More freshmen are admitted than in previous years because the Guidance Department found classes decreased from freshman year to graduation, according to Miss Kubiak.

"I want to make the insects and their world realistically acceptable, not cosmic," he explained.

Drama Director Wendy Munson, who will be in charge of technical crew and cast, Mr. Keil with direction, said, "The perfect thing to do would be to place the insects in the audience and have the audience view the insect life from the outside."

New program set

German 4 students will read German novels and play independently this spring, then report on their progress as part of a new independent learning project this spring, according to Language Chairman Gregor Haggen.

For '70 class

May Project study underway

Members were Mrs. Frances Horwich, mother of Senior Carl; Mr. Stuart Rico, father of freshman Barbara; Mr. Jerry Ferguson, biology teacher; Mrs. Eunice McGuire, English teacher; and Miss Karen Robb, guidance chairman.

Of 104 students in May Project all but 36 turned in folders registering the rejection of employers, parent sponsors, and themselves, the report said.

A sampling of 32 completed folders indicated 31 students, 26 parents, 38 sponsors, and 3 teachers considered the Project more worthwhile than classroom experience.

One student, one parent, three sponsors, and two teachers felt that the Project had been a waste of time.

Four students and one teacher, however, considered beneficial the Thursday afternoon sessions at which seniors discussed their Projects.

Of 21 teachers who evaluated the May Projects' effect on curriculum, seven said their courses continued as usual.

Three others responded enthusiastically, citing high student morale and increased student interest and opportunities for small group activities.

The 11 remaining teachers said they observed general lessening in effort, attendance, promptness and cooperation.

Advisers of extracurricular activities commented as follows: SLCC, unaffected because new officers elected before Project began; Student Board, absence of seniors made Board ineffective; Publications, seniors failed to fulfill obligations to the Midway and yearbook may suffer in '70 because of new spring deadlines.

Meeting to hear U-Highers

About 15 U-Highers and their music teacher of last year, Mrs. Roberta Newman, will participate in a convention of the Independent Schools Association of the Central States, November 12-15 at the Fifth-Congress Hotel.

Theme of the convention is "The Need for Risk." Teachers will emphasize experimentation to find ways of making all areas of curriculum interesting and meaningful.

The music program for which Mrs. Newman is chairman will consist of four sessions, involving the ideas of students, a musician and a professional educator concerned with how music curriculum should be improved.

The U-Highers will take part in two of the four sessions. In the first session they will give constructive criticism of their music education. For the second session, dramatizations and ideas on how music classes might be made more appealing to non-musicians will be presented.

Seniors Stuart Sherman and Carl Turner have each written a composition which both will perform individually. They will speak about problems in interpretation and discuss how their interpretation of the compositions differ.

New officers at work

ELECTED LESS than two weeks ago, new class steering committee members are already at work.

Marc Rosen, Jeff Jones and Joel Goldberg, winners of the senior balloting, are busy planning the November 20 Colloquia Conference with the original four class officers, according to Marcia.

Jay Goller, president of the newly elected freshman steering committee (center in photo with Marc and Jeff, who are showing him the Senior Newsletter which reports officers' plans), said he and his other class officers are setting up an all class meeting to discuss parties.

They hope to restore the Senior Project which was dropped after the first month of school last year, according to Jay. "I'd like to provide a Freshman bulletin board and suggestion box for freshmen," he added.

Other freshmen elected were Lynn Daniels, vice-president; Ruth Cohen, secretary; and Eric Uhlenbusch, treasurer.

Insects' to parody humans in fall theater production

Insects will parody humans - loving, living, killing, eating and creating - in Theater Workshop's fall production, "The World We Live In," by Josef and Karel Capek.

The play, originally scheduled for November 14-15, now will take place Thursday-Saturday, Dec. 4-6 at Lutheran Theological Seminary, 64th street and University avenue. Time and ticket price will be decided later.

"The World We Live In" shows how one kind of society's foibles and morass parallel those of another," said Drama Director Robert Keil.

"The only difference is that one is the insect world and the other the human life," he adds.

Actors will be costumed as the insects they portray.

One human character will be a vagrant who serves as commentator. He will both observe and be part of the action.

Mr. Keil chose the play because it offered a large cast which would permit more students to participate.

He also said that he was interested in potential staging effects and the unusual characters.

Mr. Keil originally hoped to do a musical montage, involving film, music and dance, as well as the insects. He was favored by a more conventional play.

He said he had seen cuttings of "The World We Live In" at a high school speech contest. After reading the entire script several times, he felt that the action and dialogue in plays he was looking for. He felt it would please his students and provide him with a challenge.

Mr. Keil sees his biggest job as "making the insect world believable."

Other Vests in Fancy prints, tapestry and leathers

from $15 to $40

Buckskin Top

Veats with fingers - the "IN" LOOK $25

Other Vests

in "The Store For Men"

"The Store For Men"

1502 East 55th Street
Last year's Midway receives top rating

Meeting strengthened standards, the Midway won the highest All American, highest rating awarded by the National Scholastic Press Association for its second and third quarter issues last year.

It is the eighth consecutive such award received from NSPA, whose headquarters are at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis. NSPA twice annually judges about 800 high school newspapers. Publication was considered by others in schools of similar enrollment and printed by similar methods as similar in frequency.

The Midway was judged by error in the class of bi-weekly, commercially-priced offset papers in school of 1000-7001 enrollment in grades 10-12. It should have been in the 500-401 group.

Because too many papers had been receiving All American, 0-15 per cent of entries considered ideal minimum), NSPA revised its rating system. A letter accompanying the Midway's scorebook explains that the highest rating that can be earned on scorebook points alone now is First Class, the second highest award.

To earn All American a paper must receive from judges a First Class rating plus Marks of Distinction for unusually high quality and distinctive, appealing work in at least four of the following five areas: Content and coverage, writing and editing, editorial leadership, physical appearance and photography.

The Midway earned a First Class rating with 3600 scorebook points, 200 over the minimum required in its category, and 200 under the possible maximum, not counting bonuses. It went on to receive All American with all five possible Marks of Distinction.

Judges' comments were:

Copy and Coverage - Coverage of all included; Current account reflects events of interest; school varied comments.

Writing and Editing - Stated and supported. Thought development is not consistently well-written. Stuff like a bowl.

Picture and Pulp - More through pictures. Better use of names. Better use of negatives are outstanding. What a far are the 10 best in the country?

Physical Appearance - More attention to detail in photos and layout of page. But is it competition?

The Midway's adviser, Mr. Wayne Bruder, wrote the revised NSPA scorebook. He was assisted by the "editor, Dick Dwarkin. Final editing was by members of the NSPA staff.

Mr. Bruder was asked to write an article about the new scorebook for NSPA's magazine, Scholastic, to which he is a regular contributor.

As a strong decisive action with political implication."

"THE DECISION to dismiss school at 13:35 p.m. can and will be misconstrued by some as politically motivated," Mr. Carmichael said that Clara wanted to be free from the classroom as a platform for their own views if for no other reason than to provide an example of adults who think, feel and write with difficult problems of choice.

At the same time, he added, the teachers should not use the classroom as a platform for their own views, nor should the teachers express their own views in such a way that he in fact discourages his students from writing with problems just as he has done."

Mr. Carmichael said, "Any action is a political action if it affects people and their political destiny."

"To keep the school open could be viewed as a political decision," he said.

"To dismiss school would certainly have been viewed by many as a strong decisive action with political implication."

By Jeff Carser

"It's a position that requires 10 per cent Band-Aids and 90 per cent taking care of the needs Band-Aids cannot cover."

That's how Mrs. Thigpen views her job. A graduate of Loyola U., Mrs. Thigpen came here this 18 m.m. after two years in the Chicago area. She likes her work because it gives her a chance to individualize. She feels a school nurse should be able and willing to work with students their choice.

As a strong decisive action with political implication."

"THE DECISION to dismiss school at 13:35 p.m. can and will be misconstrued by some as politically motivated," Mr. Carmichael said that Clara wanted to be free from the classroom as a platform for their own views if for no other reason than to provide an example of adults who think, feel and write with difficult problems of choice.

At the same time, he added, the teachers should not use the classroom as a platform for their own views, nor should the teachers express their own views in such a way that he in fact discourages his students from writing with problems just as he has done."
As the Midway sees it
For the Moratorium, against a school position

The Vietnam Moratorium, October 15, was a carefully conceived project. The Lab Schools decision concerning that project was, unfortunately, not nearly as carefully conceived. The statements and restatements of policy, an impulsive student government, a poll and confusion culminated in a personal statement that self-contradictory and injurious to students.

Student Government introduced the Moratorium matter to students October 3 in assembly and homeroom. Students interested in the project described it to homerooms, answered questions and then discussed the idea of giving students the opportunity to vote on the school's policy for the Moratorium.

IT WAS OBVIOUS from the questions asked at the meeting that few students knew about the Moratorium or were prepared to vote on it thoughtfully after a brief meeting chaired by biased speakers.

The faculty in a meeting October 5 refused to participate in the referendum. It felt the Moratorium was a matter of personal decision, not institutional policy. Many teachers pointed out that a popular vote, therefore, was irrelevant. They questioned the propriety of student government asking for such a vote, giving students the impres­sion that they would affect school policy on the matter.

The faculty policy committee later in the week suggested to Lab Schools Director Francis V. Lloyd, Jr. that school remain open Moratorium day.

MR. LLOYD decided on a policy requiring all teachers planning to be absent to find and pay a substitute or make alternate arrangements for their classes.

School would remain open and parents could be required of students planning to be absent.

A statement of this policy was mailed to all student homes.

The policy committee reconsidered its position and proposed to Mr. Lloyd that school be dismissed 12:30 p.m. that day. Mr. Lloyd explained it "the school as an institution should not be forced, at this time, to take a stand on the issue of the Vietnam Moratorium; the decision to participate or not to participate should be entirely a matter of conscience."

At the same time, it was asserted, "In the interest of the Laboratory Schools, the freedom of all individuals to act upon the dictates of their conscience should be maximal."

THE UNIVERSITY's legal department advised Mr. Lloyd that "the sanctions concerning assignment for a substitute should not be imposed on any member of the faculty who is absent for the whole or part of 1/2 a day."

So Mr. Lloyd issued a new policy providing for a 12:30 dismissal last Wednesday.

Opinions get their due

Because the Midway staff feels a forum of opinions has become an increasingly important part of the paper's responsibility, beginning this issue it is expanding its editorial-opinion section to two pages.

A major reason for the format change was to provide more space for letters. The Midway staff feels that present faculty members and parents, but has not always had space to print them. This year's staff feels space for letters is a priority matter — the game of opinions deserves to be played and the paper is one place where they can be aired for everyone to read. The letter policy remains the same and we hope to appear on these pages.

TO FURTHER PROMOTE use of the Midway as a vehicle of school opinion, the staff adopted several new features, has added a regular public opinion poll of students on current topics. This issue the subject is the Christmas Moratorium. In the interest of the school, it will be Student Government.

This week's issue will provide an expanded opportunity to state its own opinions. Too.

Many U-Highers have strong feelings about the Vietnam war, but don't know how to make their thoughts known. They say they don't like what is going on in Vietnam, but they have no idea how to go about stopping the war.

As one junior girl explained, "I'm not one of those hippie-radical types. I don't want to get my head bashed at some violent peace march. I would like to have participated in the Vietnam Moratorium, but since my class was a senior, I couldn't cut school and jeopardize my grades. I might have kept on out of Yale."

A SENIOR BOY put it this way, "Listen, I don't want to get killed in Vietnam and waste all these years of cramming for grades. But I could just as easily get killed at one of those peace marches. Besides, those marches are no fun at all, with people pushing and all that walking."

It is for this group of frustrated U-Highers that I am planning my own peace demonstration. It will be called, "Bring the War to U-High Day," and it will take place downtown at the Civic Center Plaza November 15.

That is a Saturday, so don't worry about missing school and being rejected from the college of your choice.

To CONSERVE ENERGY, protesters will meet at noon in Kenwood Circle and board buses that will take them downtown.

Letters policy

The Midway welcomes letters from readers. The letters box is in the Publications Office, second floor. Letters must be signed, dated and typed. No anonymous letters will be published. The editors reserve the right to make minor alterations of style and content.

A SENIOR BOY suggested that U-Highers consider Fire Prevention Week, October 6-12, without a fire drill. There hasn't been one all year as of deadline Saturday.

WHAT COULD HAPPEN IF U-HIGH TOOK A POLITICAL STAND

KEN DEVINE

How uneasy U-High does

Protest war in peace
Conspiracy trial a waste, U-Highers believe

By Debby Kalk
Lilas would be accomplished by punishing the eight defendants of the Chicago Conspiracy trial, U-Highers questioned by a Midway reporter agreed.

Junior Dave Wolf said, "Even if these guys go to jail, there'll be others to take their places."

The defendants are being tried for crossing state lines to incite riots last year at the Democratic Convention here. Preceding over the trial is Judge Julius Hoffman. Public observers have described him as conservative. Some critics feel he has acted with prejudice against the defense.

Most U-Highers questioned admitted to being uninforme d about the trial, now in progress at the Federal Building downtown. A few blamed poor television coverage, but most admitted to not reading papers or watching television news broadcasts.

Senior Peter Kilven said, "The news media is limited by the law, but the trial has still been poorly reported. Like I'm not sure as to exactly why they are being prosecuted. I think it's a show being put on by some people and their cohorts trying to make trouble for the people who were responsible for the convention week outbreaks."

Junior Ellen Stacy said, "I think the news media blows it up much bigger than it really is in." She feels the lapse of time between the event and the trial caused the issues to lose impact.

"It is confusing, though," she said. "The judge is supposed to be a good judge, but he's been too strict. Judges just can't be impartial because their past experiences will affect their decisions and this judge is against the defendants. It's like the Eight have to prove that they are innocent instead of the judge prove that they're guilty."

Senior Elliott Minche burg said Judge Hoffman is forcing the defense lawyers the respect they deserve. He is acting in a manner not fitting for the law. He is not impartial.
The law is so ambiguous. There is a very fine line between breaking and not breaking this law. And that makes the penalty is a mistake. It just won't do a lot of good. I don't think that putting people in jail is a conspiracy. The Eight will either go free or become martyrs.

He said he didn't "feel threatened by the law because I don't plan on inciting any riots, I'm only afraid that once the Eight are jailed and people can't see there are more people in the conspiracy the government might pass laws restricting the freedom of people and speech which would affect me."

Senior Mike Needelman said, "Judge Hoffman is trying to stretch things out to harass the defendants. It's a political trial and the true process of law is a whitewash."

Sophomore Daniel Cole said, "I think that Hoffman is innocent of inciting riots. I think that they could try Chicago to support McCartney."

Senior Nancy Bruell said she was surprised "somebody didn't make a big stink about how there weren't any students or sympathetic adults chosen for the jury."

"It'll be so hard to convict someone on that law. It's so hard to judge as to whether they crossed the state line with the desire to riot, I'm not sure whether it's just a law."

She said the government can only prove the law is useful if someone wants to commit this law won't stop them. The defendants" trial might just provide the impetus for others to work against the government and hold the Eight back for 10 years at most."

Senior Ed Alpert said although the defendants might be guilty the judge "is not treating the defendants fairly and impartially. I think that the judge is restricting information that might hurt him, I think that some facts have been clearly released. He certainly isn't impartial, I mean the defendants are on trial as being against the government and he works for the government."

"And the jury voted pretty quick and the Sibbar trial they took a long time."

"It was a police riot. Both antagonized each other. I haven't seen any big riots."

"I don't agree with the Panthers and SDS so much but now I'm totally against the American political structure."

CLAPS 'N SLAPS

From a midnight cowboy to a singing dude

By Ellen Stacy

MIDWAY MAILBOX

Photo-editorial:

EAST FOYER ceiling of Bellfield Hall finally got an overhead sprinkling system last week, Senior Nancy Lynn was among the students surprised to find rain seeping from above. The mop and pail helped soak up the moisture. Think the ceiling will snow this winter?

From Principal Carl Rimme:
I am disappointed that your editorial on Attendance (October 7 issue, page 4) contains so much misinformation, because the Midway is a powerful force in the school and one that I take very seriously, but I cannot take this editorial seriously from the following reasons:

1. The claim that the new Attendance Policy "requires all students to attend all classes" is not true. Our faculty would not tolerate such a policy, nor would I. Please read the policy of page 5 of the Faculty Handbook; six copies have been on reserve in the Library for you and for your readers since the opening of school.

2. The decision to enforce class attendance was not made this summer but rather last spring; on June 3, following discussion in most if not all departments.

There are other major and minor errors in the editorial, but my greatest concern is the failure of your writer to understand what the policy says about teacher responsibility for the students assigned to him. The policy does not say how or where to teach his students is too important. Our faculty would not tolerate such a policy, nor would I.

Thus I find it odd that the Midway would urge so strongly that "in a manner such as attendance, a teacher's judgment about his students is too important to be replaced by an overall disciplinary rule."

The statement is perfectly true, but juxtaposed with the inaccuracies in your editorial, this same statement, oddity enough, is misleading.

Editors note: The Midway staff is sorry if we misunderstood its intention. It does not believe it was factually in error, although it probably could have worded it better. The sentence about all students being required to attend all formal class hours lacked clarity. The policy states that all students are required to attend all formal class hours except for independent learning situations, conference hours, counseling appointments, supervised study programs, assemblies and other class hours designated as such. As mentioned in the Faculty Handbook, the new Attendance Policy "requires all students to attend all formal class hours except for independent learning situations, conference hours, counseling appointments, supervised study programs, assemblies and other class hours designated as such."

The point of the editorial was that some teachers and students feel one policy concerning cutting hours should not apply uniformly to all students. If the school administration should formulate its own policy according to its judgment, the faculty and individual students, such a policy might allow some students to skip formal classes if they are finding out in class-in-class instruction; the policy makes this point rather clearly.

You still have a choice

From Guidance Chairman Karen Robb:
I regret the mixed message conveyed in the headlines and content of the September 27th article regarding counseling assignments.

The assignment is not as dramatic as inferred in your article. Last year's counseling assignments were made alphabetically; this year they are made by grade level. It is not realistic, however, to think that every student or counselor will relate to one another equally well so we will continue now, as in the past, to ensure that students be assigned to counselors who with whom they feel they can relate to most comfortably. Unlike the past, the counseling assignments for this year were not done periodically but will be done now in a more structured manner.

Counseling from the statement made to all students in the opening school newsletter, counselors are not going to be assigned to any particular student but will counsel the student who has worked with or wish to work with counselors other than the one assigned to their grade level will do so. The assignments are not meant to be static."

It is important, however, to get to know your counselor.

photo by Jon Harrison

Miss Robb
Footmen face winless Raiders

Hoping to remain undefeated in Independent School League (ISL) soccer competition, U-High plays winless North Shore 4 p.m. today there.

The Maroons defeated the Raiders 1-0 in the season's first game.

Two non-league games - St. Joseph's 4 p.m. Friday here and New Trier West 4 p.m. Saturday there - may be close, Maroons defeated both teams last season, 4-1 and 2-0 respectively.

U-High faces Francis Parker, second-place ISL, Tuesday at 4 p.m., here.

The Maroons defeated the Colonels 21-4 at home October 3.

In an unusual Saturday game, U-High plays a non-league contest at Illiana Christian 5 p.m. November 1.

Maroons tied Illiana 1-1 last year.

U-High had a new goalie, Senior Paul Silvern, when they faced Illiana Christian October 17 here. Maroons won 5-1, as Jones and Nedselsky scored.

Varsity and freshman-sophomore squads' first defeat, both 3-0, at Oak Park October 7. Varsity coach noted it was the last 10 was canceled due to inclement weather. It will not be rescheduled.

Strength from their forward line, according to Miss Lene. It consists of Seniors Karen Tave and Diane Markovitz and Juniors Pat Spargo, Carol Iona and Kim Uhlennuth.

"These girls have played together before and have a high skill level," she explained. "They work well together, switch positions, communicate and are aggressive."

Performances of Hildebrand and Thomas were hindered because they were "out-classed." Senior Paul Silvern was "out-classed." Senior Rudolph Fair was too ill to run.

In an unscheduled meet Oct. 9, U-High finished second of four teams, 67, Chicago City first with 48, Chicago Park 66 and Kenwood 60.

Hildebrand finished second, Thomas 11th and Wilson 14th.

Intramurals don't lure U-Highers

Soccer, touch football, badminton and tennis intramurals are attracting about 30 participants a day, mostly pre-freshmen, according to Sponsor Tom Tourlas.

Interclass sports, clubs, interest groups and other commitments keep more U-Highers from participating, he believes.

Intramurals are scheduled 2:15-4:05 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, and 2:30-3:15 p.m. Tuesdays. There are no intramural games.

A junior-senior touch football game, which could be the beginning of an interclass tournament, is tentatively scheduled for tomorrow, said Junior Jim Naidick, coordinator.

Harrier coach anticipates close Lake Forest meet

In the closest game of the year, U-High defeated Lake Forest 4-3 October 10 here. Lake Forest scored two goals in the first quarter, but U-High came back with four consecutive scores by Forwards Tom Nedselsky, Jeff Jones, Jim Parsons and Chris Jago to get the lead.

Lake Forest scored with five minutes remaining in the game, but U-High held to win. Freshman-soph also won, 5-0.

Although playing an excellent game, the Maroons lost to undefeated Evanston 3-0 October 14 there. The Wildkats scored one in each of the first three periods.

U-High has beaten Evanston just once in the past eight years, according to Varsity Coach Sandy Fatalk.

Freshman-sophomore squad was sound upon four times in the first quarter and lost to Evanston 5-0.

Maroons never seemed to get unwind as they tied Elgin 1-1 October 15 there. Jack scored the tying goal with 5 minutes remaining in the game.

ISL soccer standings: U-High, 4-6-1; Francis Parker, 3-6-1; Elgin, 1-5-2; Lake Forest, 1-5-1; North Shore, 0-4-4.

Hockey team may become official here

U-High should have an official ice hockey team this winter, according to Junior Gary Pekoe, who organized a predecessor team last winter and is continuing work on the project.

Parents sponsor Saturday sports

Supervised play in swimming, basketball and gymnastics in Sandy Gym will be available 19 Saturday mornings.

The Parent's Association has in mind a full season of tennis intramurals.

Parents plan to sponsor the Intramural Association, which could be the beginning of a Student Government.

Hard-rocking sports, clubs, interest groups and other commitments keep more U-Highers from participating, he believes.

In charge of coordinating arrangements for the Parent's Association is Mrs. Alma Offenkrantz. She has information, according to Gary, 3600-3500.

Skates and aids are needed by the Parent's Association for sale this year. Plans for its new Scholarship Program are to be announced by Gary.

S.U. takes over cheerleaders

Cheerleaders now are under the jurisdiction of Student Union instead of the phy-ed department. Physical Education Chairman William Zavars and Dean of Students Randrod Carmichael initiated the change to align cheerleaders with other student organizations supervised by the Union.

Chosen at tryouts Friday, varsity cheerleaders are as follows: Seniors - Laurie Dunan and Margie Anderson; Juniors - Kathy Zes."