Committee proposes crackdown on cutters

By Pete Guttman

Class cutters, beware. And latecomers, too.

A four-point plan designed to reduce cuts and tardiness through principal-student and principal-parent meetings is being considered by a faculty committee headed by Principal Geoff Jones.

According to an outline of the plan, still subject to change, after a student cuts a class once, Attendance Secretary JoAnn Atkinson would send a detailed letter to the student's parents. A copy of this letter would also be sent to the student's counselor. After a second cut in the same class, Mr. Jones would have a conference with the student and another letter would be sent to the student's home.

"These meetings are designed to find out why the student is cutting so the problem can be solved," Mr. Jones explained.

Following a third cut in the same class, Mr. Jones would confer with the student's parents. He would explain that the next cut would result in the student being suspended without credit from the class for the rest of the quarter.

Under a policy proposed by Mr. Jones and accepted by the committee, cuts and absences will be included on quarterly grade reports.

The proposed attendance policy is not designed to penalize students for cutting, according to Mr. Jones. Instead, he explained, "This system brings attention to the reason the student is cutting and eventually helps the student. Because if he misses classes he falls behind."

Mr. Jones added that because U-High has fewer high school days than most other schools, attendance is imperative for students. "We only meet 171 days compared to 384 for public schools and our classes meet only four days instead of five," he said. "So we have much less instruction time than other schools, so attending classes is very important," he added.

The plan for tardiness is similar to the policy for cuts. Following the fourth tardy in a class, a letter would be sent home. Following the fifth tardy Mr. Jones would have a conference with the student and another letter would be sent out the reason for the tardiness. The sixth tardy would result in a principal-parent conference. Suspension without credit from the class would accompany the seventh tardy.

Parker, Latin get party invitations

By James Marks, political editor

If you see strange faces at Cultural Union (C.U.'s) dance

Vol. 53, No. 2 • University High School, 1362 E. 59th St., Chicago, Ill. 60667 • Tues., Nov. 1, 1977

Soph's hush for money

By Deb Arazel

Eight sophomores have taken a vow of silence, hoping to make money by keeping their mouths shut.

The sophs (see photo) are seeking employment as a mime troupe. Having begun performing last year under the direction of Denise Berry, '77, a professional clown and mime, this year the group is continuing on its own. Using hand and body motions, the troupe conveys actions and emotions in lights without words.

The U-Highers hope to perform at birthday parties and work for storms, offering in front of them to draw people in. Already they have performed for Middle and Lower School students and were paid to mime on a bus commissioned for a promotion for Canasil Clothing, a downtown clothing store.

Most of the work, the troupe hopes, will involve children. "I enjoy working with kids," Chris Maddi said. "Children, for me, are the best part of miming. Although it's true that adults can understand the deeper meaning of the skits, the children eat it up because there's so much imagination involved in mime. They're incredibly "alive."

Planning takes considerable time, Shirin Moayyad said. "We devote about three lunch periods a week to practicing and developing new material." Alex Garbers added, "One of us will come up with a situation, then we discuss it as a group in order to give it a further plot, a message, or if it's a comic situation, try to make it as funny as possible."

Troupe members design their own facial makeup, which consists of a base of white with colored designs, generally teardrops, lightening bolts or streaks of varying colors. Costumes consist of black pants and shirts for boys and solid color leotards and tights for girls.

"For mime you have a costume or makeup that's not too in Arts Week to split into three phases

By James Marks, political editor

Arts Week will be replaced by yearlong musical performances, a week for displaying student and faculty art work and another week of lectures and workshops under a plan proposed by an evaluation committee and accepted by Principal Geoff Jones and the faculty steering committee.

The six students on the committee originally met last spring in response to an open invitation from Student Activities Director Donald Jacobs to evaluate the May Festival. Continuing discussion before school began this fall, the committee broadened its tasks to include improvement of all student activities, communication within the school and community participation in school activities.

The committee includes Katie Kalven, Katie Patz, Peggy Mond, Mary Johnston, Susan Marks and Andy Neal.

Before Katie Kalven, committee chairperson, and Student Activities Director Donald Jacobs had their first meeting, the committee checked old Arts Week files for expenditures, spoke with teachers involved in Arts Week and invited interested students and faculty to voice their opinions. Katie invited the proposal to Unified Arts Department Chairperson Robert Erickson and Music Teacher Dominic Piano. "They offered advice on how to improve the proposal," she said.

The committee proposed Arts Week activities be separated into several events, Katie explained. Because "The format centered artistic efforts too much. We look out for art the rest of the year and also it was too big a job to do short a time for the small group of students who are usually interested in working to pull Arts Week off."

The committee will continue considering possible changes in the May Festival, which according to Mr. Jacobs, also puts too much of a burden on the few students who work on it. Also see editorial on page 2.

Volley follies

MAYHEM FILLED Sunny Gym Friday as students battled faculty in six volleyball games, four of them won by teachers. Commemorating the birthday of John Dewey, founder of the Laboratory Schools (the school for the children of the faculty and staff), and the centennial of the Laboratory Schools, sunset-faculty Halloween dress-up day sponsored by Cultural Union.

Photo by Jon Cunningham

PRESENTING a tough image, mime troupe members perform "Runnie Ballet," one of their skits, in which two warring street gangs encounter each other and fight. The sophs, from left, are Beth Browning, Shirin Moayyad, Debra Schwartz, Jon Siegel, Chris Maddi, Alex Garbers, David Simek and Kristin Skinor.

"Godspell," the rock musical based on the Gospel according to St. Matthew, will be presented in mid-January as the delayed fall production, which awaits completion of theater remodeling. "Godspell," the first musical here in five years, was adapted from the Gospel by John Michael Tebelak. Stephen Schwartz wrote the music.

Photo by David Trunaws

"Godspell," the rock musical based on the Gospel according to St. Matthew, will be presented in mid-January as the delayed fall production, which awaits completion of theater remodeling. "Godspell," the first musical here in five years, was adapted from the Gospel by John Michael Tebelak. Stephen Schwartz wrote the music.
First Person

Witness, too, feels the trauma of rape

By Mark Hornung

An April morning saw bright sunlight on the 56th Street Illinois Central platform, where I was waiting for a northbound train. Through the dark windows of the warming house I could see the outlines of figures of a man and a woman embracing.

Embraced, I walked past the warming house and down the platform. Moments later a man walked inside, bent over, down the platform and out the exit stairs. Five minutes later a woman walked out. A woman with frizzy blond hair, she wore corduroy pants, a sweater and a checked jacket. Her left hand covered her eyeglasses.

By Paula Niedenthal

students and professors the operation of a sound transmission electron microscope.

As and His Royal Highness walked in the Cloisters, Swett Hall to enjoy his tea, he was accompanied by the sound of changing leaves, though rarely found in America—a group of sound recording engineers, an ancient and widespread custom in England.

As A Little memoir of his visit, the University presented Prince Charles with two gifts. One was a block of graphite used in the making of the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction, accomplished of course, on this campus. Yes, it did happen in 1942, before the prince was even born.

But then, the last Prince Charles to visit the University came in 1924, so the University felt it had to catch up on old times.

The second gift was a leather-bound gift copy of: "The Idea of the University," by Robert Spence. The prince must have appreciated that, since his visit probably left him without an idea of his own.

Says who?

What do you think of college admissions policies which apply different standards to members of different ethnic and racial groups?

Mary Ann Harrison Kathryn Harkin

Mary Ann Harrison, freshman: I don't think it's right. You should be allowed to college for what you know and not because you're a minority.

KATHY HANKIN, sophomore: I think that the practice of discrimination they give minority groups as much of a chance as nonminorities.

DON’T LET IT SLIP THROUGH YOUR FINGERS.

5LIN

Student Legislative Coordinating Council’s (SLCC) allocation of Student Activities Funds to student organizations this year reveals the need for a better organized plan to insure fair decisions, intelligent use of the available money.

Every U-Higher is charged $30 as part of tuition to support the Fund (another $30 goes to the Midway and U-Highlights). It’s parents, of course, who shell out the dough.

SLCC has done its best to make fair decisions in deciding which organizations will, in the end, get the money. But it all depends on who people make the decision happen to be.

Each year, SLCC gives guidelines for making out budgets, but what administrators or student government will or will not permit in the way of activities, aren’t told what SLCC’s own criteria for an organization as an organization is. That seems to change from year to year and needs to be set down on paper, too.

In recent years, SLCC hasn't allocated all the money available, or followed the guidelines the club weren't making the cuts they needed to. So parents have begun asking administrators why they are being charged so much money.

SLCC has taken a step in the right direction with a new plan to review club budgets each quarter. Of this step does not solve the problem of club confusion over budgets and resultant delays in getting allocations decided. SLCC needs to include clear guidelines in a student handbook.

Mary Ann Harrison Kathy Harkin

Mary Ann Harrison, freshman: I don’t think it’s right. You should be allowed to college for what you know and not because you’re a minority.

KATHY HANKIN, sophomore: I think that the practice of discrimination they give minority groups as much of a chance as nonminorities.

Frustration and salary

Lab Schools teachers have a unique problem. Besides fighting to get a pay raise this year, as teachers at other schools have, they're fighting just to keep even. The faculty bargaining team, as of early last month, was in the process of persuading President Wright to sign a new agreement which would deprive 90 percent of the faculty of their scheduled pay raises for two or more years with lower pay at lower steps, caught up with them.

The University’s original proposal, which would have it spending $110,000 less this year on teacher salaries than the previous year in order to hold the line on year-round tuition to spend, was rejected.

The University’s original proposal, which included a 4% percent raise in teacher salaries, was rejected.

That may be so. But it’s also so that teachers really expected their scheduled increases based on years of experience. And, like everyone else, they feel the pain of cost of living increases. Some of them.

The University itself has raised its housing charges 12 percent. Area school districts largely have been granted delays.

The message, then, is, fairly clear. The University doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to give teachers adequate salary raises. In fact, it doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to keep the salaries at the same level they already are.

Editor’s note: At a bargaining session Nov. 30, after this editorial was written, the University proposal was modified to increase the salary for teachers, although the renewal of the current contract was delayed.

Frustration and salary

Lab Schools teachers have a unique problem. Besides fighting to get a pay raise this year, as teachers at other schools have, they're fighting just to keep even. The faculty bargaining team, as of early last month, was in the process of persuading President Wright to sign a new agreement which would deprive 90 percent of the faculty of their scheduled pay raises for two or more years with lower pay at lower steps, caught up with them.

The University’s original proposal, which included a 4 percent pay raise, would have it spending $189,000 less this year on teacher salaries at the Lab Schools than in the past, despite having $55,000 more in school funds to spend, according to Faculty Associates. The money is going to be spent by administrators. The administrators claim the plan would relieve the faculty of having to make the decisions themselves.

That may be so. But it’s also so that teachers really expected their scheduled increases based on years of experience. And, like everyone else, they feel the pain of cost of living increases. Some of them.

The University itself has raised its housing charges 12 percent. Area school districts largely have been granted delays.

The message, then, is, fairly clear. The University doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to give teachers adequate salary raises. In fact, it doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to keep the salaries at the same level they already are.

Frustration and salary

Lab Schools teachers have a unique problem. Besides fighting to get a pay raise this year, as teachers at other schools have, they’re fighting just to keep even. The faculty bargaining team, as of early last month, was in the process of persuading President Wright to sign a new agreement which would deprive 90 percent of the faculty of their scheduled pay raises for two or more years with lower pay at lower steps, caught up with them.

The University’s original proposal, which included a 4 percent pay raise, would have it spending $189,000 less this year on teacher salaries at the Lab Schools than in the past, despite having $55,000 more in school funds to spend, according to Faculty Associates. The money is going to be spent by administrators. The administrators claim the plan would relieve the faculty of having to make the decisions themselves.

That may be so. But it’s also so that teachers really expected their scheduled increases based on years of experience. And, like everyone else, they feel the pain of cost of living increases. Some of them.

The University itself has raised its housing charges 12 percent. Area school districts largely have been granted delays.

The message, then, is, fairly clear. The University doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to give teachers adequate salary raises. In fact, it doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to keep the salaries at the same level they already are.

Frustration and salary

Lab Schools teachers have a unique problem. Besides fighting to get a pay raise this year, as teachers at other schools have, they’re fighting just to keep even. The faculty bargaining team, as of early last month, was in the process of persuading President Wright to sign a new agreement which would deprive 90 percent of the faculty of their scheduled pay raises for two or more years with lower pay at lower steps, caught up with them.

The University’s original proposal, which included a 4 per cent pay raise, would have it spending $189,000 less this year on teacher salaries at the Lab Schools than in the past, despite having $55,000 more in school funds to spend, according to Faculty Associates. The money is going to be spent by administrators. The administrators claim the plan would relieve the faculty of having to make the decisions themselves.

That may be so. But it’s also so that teachers really expected their scheduled increases based on years of experience. And, like everyone else, they feel the pain of cost of living increases. Some of them.

The University itself has raised its housing charges 12 percent. Area school districts largely have been granted delays.

The message, then, is, fairly clear. The University doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to give teachers adequate salary raises. In fact, it doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to keep the salaries at the same level they already are.

Frustration and salary

Lab Schools teachers have a unique problem. Besides fighting to get a pay raise this year, as teachers at other schools have, they’re fighting just to keep even. The faculty bargaining team, as of early last month, was in the process of persuading President Wright to sign a new agreement which would deprive 90 percent of the faculty of their scheduled pay raises for two or more years with lower pay at lower steps, caught up with them.

The University’s original proposal, which included a 4 percent pay raise, would have it spending $189,000 less this year on teacher salaries at the Lab Schools than in the past, despite having $55,000 more in school funds to spend, according to Faculty Associates. The money is going to be spent by administrators. The administrators claim the plan would relieve the faculty of having to make the decisions themselves.

That may be so. But it’s also so that teachers really expected their scheduled increases based on years of experience. And, like everyone else, they feel the pain of cost of living increases. Some of them.

The University itself has raised its housing charges 12 percent. Area school districts largely have been granted delays.

The message, then, is, fairly clear. The University doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to give teachers adequate salary raises. In fact, it doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to keep the salaries at the same level they already are.

Frustration and salary

Lab Schools teachers have a unique problem. Besides fighting to get a pay raise this year, as teachers at other schools have, they’re fighting just to keep even. The faculty bargaining team, as of early last month, was in the process of persuading President Wright to sign a new agreement which would deprive 90 percent of the faculty of their scheduled pay raises for two or more years with lower pay at lower steps, caught up with them.

The University’s original proposal, which included a 4 percent pay raise, would have it spending $189,000 less this year on teacher salaries at the Lab Schools than in the past, despite having $55,000 more in school funds to spend, according to Faculty Associates. The money is going to be spent by administrators. The administrators claim the plan would relieve the faculty of having to make the decisions themselves.

That may be so. But it’s also so that teachers really expected their scheduled increases based on years of experience. And, like everyone else, they feel the pain of cost of living increases. Some of them.

The University itself has raised its housing charges 12 percent. Area school districts largely have been granted delays.

The message, then, is, fairly clear. The University doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to give teachers adequate salary raises. In fact, it doesn’t consider the Lab Schools important enough to keep the salaries at the same level they already are.
Just call us number one!
Soccer, field hockey, cross country teams top league, hope to go downstate

By David Rothbart, sports editor

This is the year of the Maroon. Two league champion soccer teams, two league champion field hockey teams and a cross country team which has advanced to state sectionals has U-Highers hoping for at least one varsity team to go downstate to tournament finals.

"If we don't choke next week, we'll make it downstate," said Cross Country Coach Ron Drozd of next Saturday's sectional meet at Kaneland. "We've got the talent to get there."

In the district meet last Saturday at Champlain Christian, the Maroons placed 1st with 54 points, with Peter Lortie capturing 1st place, Dirk Vandenvoort 3rd and Craig Truitt 4th. "We started the season with an experienced team," said Maroon John Spofford. "We had five seniors on the varsity, but our main strength was our work hard to improve because we knew we could go downstate as a team."

Scores not previously reported in the Midway include the following:

At a U-High Invitational Oct. 12, the Maroons placed 1st out of 6 teams. South Shore 1st with 70 points, Lincoln Way 2nd with 53 and Lake Forest 3rd with 31. Nadia Comaneci, watch out! A girls' gymnastics team to DEFEATING every team in the ISL twice, the fresh-soph team captured its sixth consecutive ISL title with a 9-0 record (13-0 overall), remaining undefeated for the fourth time since Larry McFarlane began coaching in 1971. Since then, his teams have compiled a 43-5-4 record. This year's team is the first to go both undefeated and untied.

Scores of games not previously covered, U-High first, fresh-soph in parenthesis:

North Shore, Oct. 11, there, 8-2 (6-2); Oak Park, Oct. 12, here, 5-2 (2-0); Latin, Oct. 14, here, 9-0 (5-0); Lake Forest Academy, Oct. 15, here, 2-1 (0-1); Forest Grove, Oct. 15, there, 5-3 (3-3); Prep Academy, Oct. 15, here, 4-0 (2-1); Prep Academy, Oct. 16, there, 5-2 (5-4); Prep Academy, Oct. 16, there, 5-2 (6-3); Prep Academy, Oct. 16, there, 5-2 (5-4); Prep Academy, Oct. 16, there, 5-2 (6-3); Prep Academy, Oct. 16, there, 5-2 (6-3).

WINNING ALL, but one ISL game, including their final six league contests, the varsity field hockey team fought its way to the championship with a 9-1 record (11-2 overall).

"We only lost three people from last year," said Captian Ellen Markowitz. "One moved and two graduated, so we had to play together. There and that was the main reason for our success."

The other co-captain is Anne de Melague. For the third consecutive year, the fresh-soph squad won the ISL championship with a 9-1 record (13-2 overall).

"As the season went on, our teamwork got better," commented Halfback Beata Boodell, "but we always had spirit and it helped us to win."

Previously unreported games:

Lincoln Way, Oct. 1, there, 5-3; Oak Park, Oct. 1, there, 0-5; Latin, Oct. 3, 5-2; North Shore, Oct. 5, 5-2; Lake Forest Academy, Oct. 6, there, 5-2; North Shore, Oct. 8, 5-2; Lake Forest Academy, Oct. 8, there, 5-2.

DEFEATING Lake Forest Academy 3-5, Oct. 25 there, for their second win of the season, both against the Carites, the girls' tennis team closed out the season losing six of their final seven matches to place last in the ISL with a 3-6 record (5-8 overall).

"It was basically a season of gathering experience for most of the team," said Singles Player Rhonda Gans. "I'm looking forward to next year because we should do much better now that we're experienced."

Scores of matches not previously reported:

POWELL'S BOOK STORE
1507 E. 57th St. 955-7780

Got the Munchies?---
Then give in to temptation with cookies, cake, pastry doughnuts, and other such goodies.

At Mr. G's, 1226 E. 53rd 363-2175
Full-fashioned Turtle neck sweaters.

-0-0.

Mr. G's
1502 E. 55th St.
In the Hyde Park Shopping Center 752-8100

Cornell Florist
1645 E. 55th St.
PA 14611

Full-fashioned Turtle neck sweaters.

Regularity $25

In 6 colors

NOW $19.95

Try if you've been searching around for one certain book, us check with. Chances are it's cheaper here.

A DeVASTATING Maroon offense scored four times against Latin Oct. 14 in a 4-0 fresh-soph field hockey team victory. Leading scorer Helen Stroes and Susan Radolf break away from a Roman defender.

"This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath, May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet."

—William Shakespeare
"Roses red and roses white, plucked for my love's delight. She would none of all my posies—bade me gather her blue roses."

—Rudyard Kipling
"suppose I tie is an old man carrying flowers on his head."

—E Cummings
"Little flower—but if I could understand what you are, root and all, and all in all, I should know what God and man is."

—Alfred, Lord Tennyson

People have always written about flowers. But we think they should speak for themselves.

S.Y. Bloom Florist
1443 E. 53rd St. 493-2004

Tired of boring lunches?

Do your lunches get cold and flavorless by lunchtime? Come visit the Bookstore for lunch. You can enjoy a variety of hot and cold sandwiches, all varieties of yogurt, hot soup, cold drinks, and dessert—all while you're waiting to get your film developed and buy a T-shirt. Come to the Bookstore for a new outlook on lunchtime.

University Book Store
5750 S. Ellis Ave.
753-3306

Photograph by David Rothbart.
Debaters wing to Bronx meet

By Cathy Crawford

Even though they almost missed their plane, which itself was late in taking off, Varsity Debate Team Members Ben Roberts, Joe Silverman, Tim Bell and Jeremy Friedman, a new junior transferred from Rich East in Park Forest, finally got to Bronx Science High School in New York City for a debate tournament Oct. 14.

During the two-day tournament, 100 high school teams debated this year’s debate topic selected by the American Speech Association, dealing with whether the federal government should guarantee comprehensive medical care for all citizens.

The U-Highers paid their own traveling expenses and stayed with Ben’s grandparents in Manhattan.

IN THE WIND

No dough, no go on pix

We said it once and we’ll say it again. Underclassmen who want to buy photo packages must bring $1.50 at the time their yearbook photo is taken Thursday or Friday in the Assembly Room. Schedules have been posted around the school.

Events for the next three weeks are as follows (times and places for district and sectional sports events, unknown at deadline, are not included):

TODAY
- Soccer, subsectionals: Field hockey, subsectionals.
- Wed., Nov. 2: Senior yearbook photos, Assembly Room; Field hockey, subsectionals.
- Thurs., Nov. 3: Field hockey, subsectionals.
- Fri., Nov. 4: Field hockey, subsectionals; Assembly Room; Field hockey, subsectionals.
- Sat., Nov. 5: Soccer, subsectionals; Field hockey, subsectionals; Cross country, preliminaries.
- Mon., Nov. 7: Faculty yearbook photos, Assembly Room.
- Fri., Nov. 11: All-school party, 7 p.m., cafeteria.
- Fri., Sat., Nov. 12-13: Soccer, state finals; Field hockey, state finals.
- Sat., Nov. 19: Basketball, St. Francis de Sales, 6 p.m., Here.
- Tues., Nov. 22: Midyear, not at school.

Sunday school

U-HIGHERS FOR A DAY, Vera and Stanley Cooke, parents of Kevann, check their schedule at Open House, Sun., Oct. 16.

Arriving at Bronx High, which Ben described as a drab-looking building with broken windows, more than an hour late, both U-High debate squads missed their first two preliminary rounds, but the judges gave them credit for winning and losing.

After their debates, the U-Highers observed other debates. “Watching other teams debate, we found out about different arguments, new evidence and teams,” Ben explained.

Debaters also were able to get acquainted with each other.

“Everyone was friendly and noted for each other,” Ben said. “People knew each other from debate workshops.”

By the time they were eliminated from competition, Ben and Jeremy had advanced to the octofinals, top 16 teams, and Tim and Jon to the quarterfinals, top eight teams. Ben and Jeremy also received speaker awards.

Savor the thrill of victory, the agony of defeat, with a fun, challenging game from Toys, Et Cetera’s wide selection.

TOYS ET CETERA

In Harper Court

324-6039

For a day, for a day, for a day .......

The best newstand in the world also has 2000 magazines for you!

514 and Lake Park Chicago II 0610 (312) 686-5300

BOB’S NEWSSTAND

SPECIAL MOVE-‘EM-OUT COMIC SALE!

BUY 10 COMICS-GET TWO FREE

(SAME PRICE)

HURRY!!! SALE LIMITED TO U-HIGHERS AND ORDINARY PEOPLE ONLY!

Project adds store, asphalt

Physical changes in the school which greeted U-Highers at the start of the year are part of two uncompleted projects.

A makeshift bookstore in the northeast corner of the cafeteria probably will be replaced by a permanent facility, possibly in the cafeteria dish room. Math Teacher Alan Haskell is in charge of the bookstore; new this year.

The new asphalt surface on Kenwood Mall, with painted courts for playing four-square, will get picnic benches.

Grad pens story

A feature story on media treatment of supernatural phenomena in the Chicago area, written by David Gottlieb, ’77, appears in the annual May Project.

Delicious depths of deep-dish delight

Journey to the center of a Medici pizza. Warm, wonderful, thick bread crust, gooey cheese and tomato. It's tall food for your bottomless pit.

MEDICI GALLERY AND COFFEEHOUSE

1450 E. 57th St. 667-7964

Just because we’re second-hand...

doesn’t mean we’re second rate. All our items are quality merchandise and inexpensive. Why not buy those faded pre-washed jeans at the ScholarShip Shop? And while you’re here, take a look at our handbags, games, exciting books, and other great merchandise. Drop in and say hello.

ScholarShip

1372 E. 53rd St. 752-1767

The biggest hit in town

"Ready? Hit it!"

“You say saloomi and I say salami.”

"You say postroomi and I say postroomi."

"Saloomi."

"Saloomi."

"Postroomi."

"Postroomi."

"All at the Flying Lox Box.”

No matter how you pronounce it, we have the sandwiches you love.

The Flying Lox Box

5500 S. Cornell 241-7050